

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

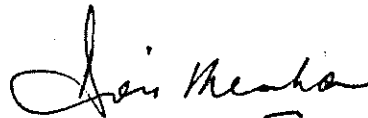

In January this year, I was honoured to be invited to conduct the 31st Intervarsity Choral Festival.

We gave various performances, culminating in a concert at the University of W.A., consisting of Bruckner's Mass in E Minor, with members of the West Australian Symphony Orchestra, and the Vespers by Rachmaninov.

The standard of this choir was very high indeed. I was most impressed by their dedication, diligence and very hard work during the two-week course and have no hesitation in stating that it was the finest choir with which I have been associated during these seven years in Australia.

The tapes of the performances bear witness to the high standard set by this choir and I think they should be given every encouragement for their activities in the future.

Yours faithfully,

DAVID MEASHAM
